Jordan and the Syria Crisis

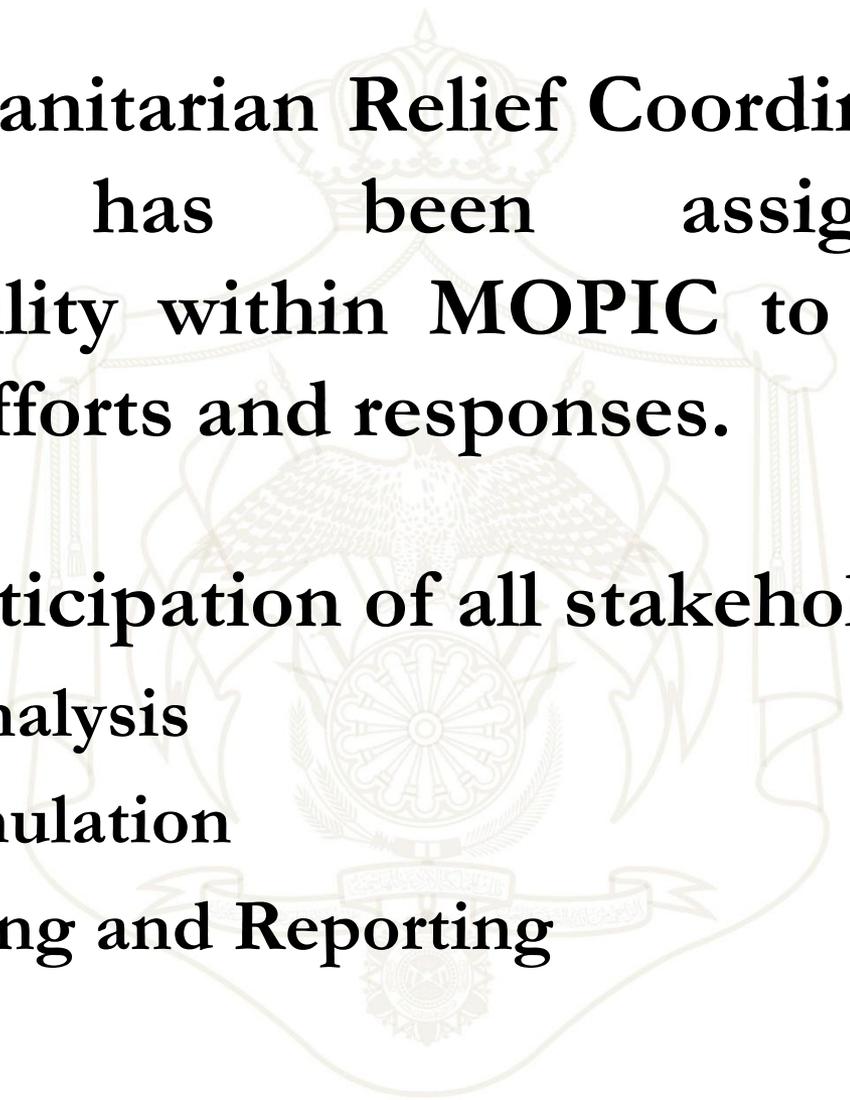

- The Syrian crisis is not merely a refugee issue, it is also a national resilience issue affecting virtually all sectors and influencing most aspects of life in Jordan.
- Capacity of Jordan to cope is at full stretch. The yearly fiscal impact is estimated at US$2.07 billion.

- Jordan has pioneered the institutionalization of the response within a national framework:
 - Jordan Response Platform for the Syria Crisis (JRPSC)
 - JRPSC Sector Task Forces
 - JRPSC Secretariat

JRPSC: A Strategic Partnership

- Jordan Response Platform for the Syria Crisis is the strategic partnership mechanism between the Government of Jordan, donors, UN agencies and NGOs for the development of an integrated refugee, resilience-strengthening and development response to the impact of the Syria crisis on Jordan.

- The Humanitarian Relief Coordination Unit (HRCU) has been assigned the responsibility within MOPIC to coordinate national efforts and responses.
 - Active participation of all stakeholders:
 - Needs analysis
 - JRP formulation
 - Monitoring and Reporting

Jordan Response Plan

- The 2015 Jordan Response Plan marked a strategic shift to a resilience based approach.
- It encompasses refugee, resilience and budget support components.
- Strong government leadership and ownership.

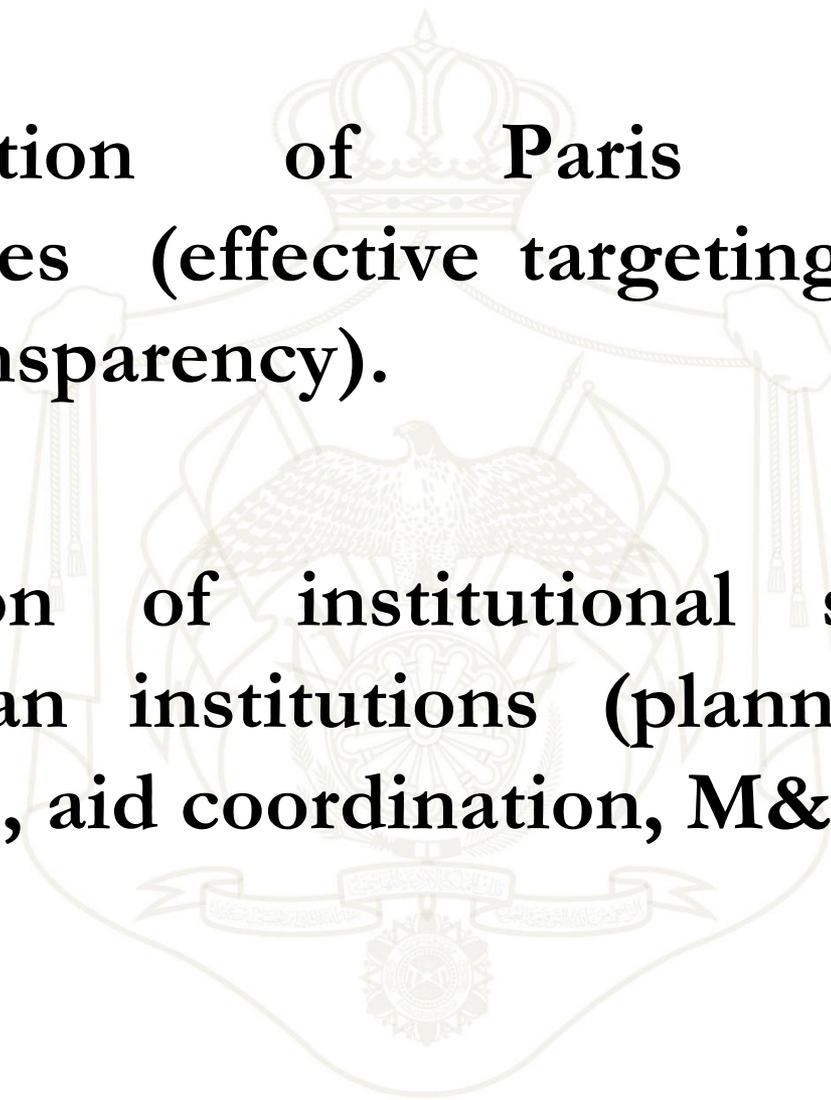

Regional Cooperation

- By comparison, regional cooperation and coordination in terms of crisis mitigation at the planning and operational level has been minimal.
- The 3RP should be a platform, not a plan, in order to avoid duplication and contradictions.

Looking Ahead

- We are facing a protracted crisis, emergency responses are not appropriate.
- Thanks to international supporters, thus far we have received around 12% of required funds for 2015.
- If the present trend continues, Jordan will be forced to make difficult decisions.

- Given the current context, we encourage the international community to consider the following:
 - International pledges and commitments should reflect the longer timeframe of the JRP 2016-2018.
 - Fair formula for responsibility sharing should be reached. i.e. for the resettling of refugees in third countries and the matching of funding needs of host countries.

- Application of Paris Declaration principles (effective targeting, efficiency and transparency).
 - Provision of institutional support to Jordanian institutions (planning, policy analysis, aid coordination, M&R, etc.).
